GUIDELINES FOR FIDEM DELEGATES AND VICE-DELEGATES

The responsibilities of national Delegates and Vice-Delegates of FIDEM are as follows:

1. To belong to FIDEM. The FIDEM constitution (see Appendix 1) states that Delegates and Vice-Delegates should be paid-up members of FIDEM. This membership may be individual or, in the cases of individuals representing a company, society or museum belonging to FIDEM, institutional.

2. To act as a focus for medal-related activity in their country and to inform the FIDEM webmaster (webmaster@fidem-medals.org) of any medallic activity in their country, so that this can be placed on the FIDEM website. Delegates and Vice-Delegates must be based in the country they represent.

3. To remain in contact with FIDEM members in their country. FIDEM will provide each Delegate and Vice-Delegate with an annual list of members in his/her country. The Delegate should then check this against his/her list and inform the treasurer of FIDEM of any discrepancies.

4. To remind members in their country that membership fees are due to be paid. The FIDEM membership year begins on 1 January. FIDEM will contact Delegates and Vice-Delegates each December to remind them that fees are due.

Members can pay their fees either directly to FIDEM, using the website (www.fidem-medals.org) or through their Delegate. If members pay directly, then it is recommended that Delegates attach an application form (downloadable from the website) to their reminder letter or email. If members pay through the Delegate, he/she should collect the fees and send them in one payment to FIDEM, using an international bank transfer (see Appendix 2 for FIDEM's bank details).

Delegates should be aware that any member whose membership fee has not been received by 1 July will be deemed no longer to be a member.

5. To disseminate information about FIDEM Congresses within their country and to coordinate their country's participation in the associated exhibitions. Delegates should:

- contact members in their country, alerting them to the forthcoming Congress and exhibition.
- direct members to the exhibiting artist information form and medal information form on the Congress website. Delegates should ensure that artists' statements are a maximum of 50 words and that they focus on the medals rather than the artist's curriculum vitae.
- collect the completed artist information forms and medal information forms and send them to the Congress organizer.
- organize the assembling of their country's medals and delivering them to the Congress organizer. FIDEM will inform each Delegate and Vice-Delegate of their quota in advance. The medals from each country should be sent in one consignment. Delegates should ensure that the medals are packed securely in containers, which indicate on the outside that they are temporary non-commercial imports for exhibition purposes only. Each container should include a list of the medals it holds. Delegates are responsible for meeting the costs of transport of the medals to the Congress organizer and for the insurance while they are in transit. They may also be required to purchase an ATA carnet; the Congress organizer will advise on this. (These costs may be covered by charging a submission fee, obtaining financial support from a national medal society, or by some other means chosen by the Delegate.) Congress organizers are responsible for insuring the medals during the exhibition and their return journey and meeting the cost of their return. Delegates are asked to ensure that the values placed on the medals are reasonable, as excessive values can lead to problems with customs authorities. It may be necessary to point out to artists that an insurance value may be set lower than a sale price. After the exhibition has closed, the medals will be returned to the Delegate, who is responsible for returning them to the artists.

- collect a fee from exhibiting artists who are not FIDEM members. These should be forwarded to the FIDEM Treasurer. This fee is currently set at 20 euro, or 40 euro for those non-member artists wishing to receive an exhibition catalogue.

- inform the Congress organizer of the number of exhibiting artists who require a catalogue (FIDEM members plus non-members who have paid a catalogue fee). This enables Congress organizers to fix the print run of the catalogue.

- write a short introductory text on medallic activity in their country for the exhibition catalogue. This should be in English. At the discretion of the Congress organizer, it may also appear in French, but in the interests of uniformity and space no other languages will be included unless there is good reason.

6. To attend, if possible, the Delegates' meetings organized by FIDEM.

7. To consider periodically whether a Congress and exhibition could be held in their country.

APPENDIX 1

Article XII of the FIDEM constitution states:

Each country is represented by (a) delegate(s) who should be a member of FIDEM, on the proposal of the members in the country concerned.

The Executive Committee should be informed of the name of the delegate, and will in its turn inform the General Assembly for ratification.

Delegates will be appointed for four year periods renewable. Each delegate may choose a vice-delegate that will replace him / her on his / her absence.

The delegate's functions are as follows:

1. To maintain regular contact with the artists, the members of FIDEM and the people interested in medallic art in their countries.
2. To transmit information, in particular about congresses and exhibitions, sent to them by the General Secretary and the Treasurer in coordination, as well as about membership fees.
3. To organise their participation in FIDEM's congresses and exhibitions.
4. To promote medallic art in his/her own country (namely with artists, teachers and students, medal manufacturers, traders, collectors and cultural associations), and to promote FIDEM in order to attract new members.
